NEW AND MOST VALUABLE MEDICINES
For hitherto intractable and incurable diseases.
No nource God Liver Oil.
GRIMAULT SYRUP OF IODIZEL HORSE
Prepared by Grimault and Co., Chemists of Paris, according to the certificates of the physicians of the Paris buspitals, detailed in the printed directions, and with the approbation of several academies, this Syrup is employed with the greatest success, in place of Cod Liver Oil, to which it is infinitely superior. It cures diseases of the which it is infinitely superior. It cures diseases of the cheek, servfula, lymphatic disorders, groom sickness, musculiar atony, and loss of appetite. It regenerates the constitution by purifying the blood, and is, in a word, the most powerful depurative known. It never fatigues the stumach and bowels like Iodide of Potassium and the Iodide of Iron, and is admissistered with the greatest efficacy to young children subject to humours or obstruction of the glands. Pr. Casenave of Saint Louis Hospital, Paris, recommends it particularly in diseases of the skin, to be taken with his Pills mentioned above. This Syrup of Iodized Horse Radish is a espital adjunct to Dr. Lerna's Phosphate of Iron.

of Iros.

DR. BURIN DU BUISSON'S DIGESTIVE LOZENGES AND POWDERS OF THE ALKALING LACTATES.

The alkaline lactates exercise the most beneficial influence over the derangements of digestion, either by their peculiar action on the mucous membrane of the stomeon, or by affording to the latter through their combination with the saliva to the gastric juice, a supply of lactic acid which all English, French, and other phaysiologists admit to be an essential principle of digestion. For the information of those who may be without medical advice, it may be stated here that the symptoms of impaired digestion are—Headache, pairs in the forebead, hemioranis, guartific, gustraigic, hearthurn, wind in the stomach and bowels, loss of apposite, conceisation, &c. All these soon disappear under the action of the Alkaline Lactates, which may be always had in longers or pewders.

No more poverty of the blood and pale complexion.

DR. LERAS'S PHOSPHATE OF IRON.

No more powerty of the blood and pale complexion.

DR. LERAS'S PHOSPHATE OF IRON.

This new ferrugineus medicine contains the elements of the blood and bones, and tron in a liquid state. It is different from all hitherto offered to the public, is liquid, colourieus, and tastelees. It speedily curse chlorosis, pains in the stomach, difficult digestion, dysamnorthons, anomia, and advantageously supersedes Carbonate of Iron, Iron reduced by Rydrogen, Lacotate of Iron, the Pills of Potassicatrirate of Iron and Iodide of Iron.

The majority of the Academies of Medicine of Paris, recommend the Phosphate of Iron to adice of delicate constitution suffering from anomia, and all other persons fatigued from ever anxiety, nervous emotions, overwork, general debility, and poorness of blood.

It is the only preparation which never causes constipation, and can be borne by the most delicate stomacha. It is the best adjunct to the Syrup of Iodized Horsensidah and Moyal Rikir of Yellow Feruvian Bark.

DR. CAZERAVES VEGETABLE PILLS.

Superior to all other pills. A trial would be their vest recommendation. Whenever a purgative is required for billous and pituitous attacks, these may be asfely used, because heigher nauses nor colic, and may be taken as digestives at meal or bed time.

OLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.—Unparelleled Popularity.—The wonder'ul cures effected by these unequalled remedies in all parts of the world have won for them their present favour. Both Pills and Ointment are composed of ingredients which purity at the same time that they strengthen. No one can deny that health depends upon pure blood and the natural action of the animal organs. Both objects are effected without risk ordanger by Holloway's medicuments, which are as inapern as they are potent. Internal dis rieers and external blemishes succumb to their power. These remedies, applicable for the relief of the commoncest complaints, we no less adequate to deal safely with the most formitivities and dangerous diseases which can afflict markind. MPORTANT NOTICE TO ALL.—BORWICK'S
GERMAN BAKING POWDER makes breat in a few minutes without the use of yeast—makes puddings and pearty light and wholescene.
The only effectual preventive of indigestion.

Colonial Testimonials, Sydney, 4th May, 1866.

I hereby certify that I have made a carolin analysis of Borwick's Baking Powder. The ingredients are all of the purest description, perfectly wholesome, wall and proprisionally mixed, and will keep well in any climate. Indeed, I consider its beautiful farinaceous powder, and well qualified for raising bread, pastry. &c.

CHARLES WATT, Analytical Chemist.

Having tried Borwick's Baking Powder for the last four years, I have great pleasure in stating my high appreciation of its usefulness in all matters of cookery wherein I have used it. Indeed, I should not like to be without it; it is my constant kitchen companion.

DREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—(More commonly called Epps's Homecopathic Cocoa, as being prepared and introduced by James Epps, the Homesopathic Chemist first established in Hagland.) No other berunge is equally invigorating and sustaining for breakfast. By the special mode of preparation applied, the fine flavour possessed by high-class cocoa is rendered extremely delicate and grateful. So general a favourite has it become, that thousands now use Cocoa who never used Cocoa before. "Cocoa stands very runch higher than to are coffee." Dr. Hassell says it is made simply by pouring boiling water or milk on the preparation as sold. Tin-lined | h., | ib., and I ib. packets. The Sydney Morning Berald.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 3, 1867.

In the Assembly, yesterday.

Mr. Marrix said, in answer to Mr. Maepherson, that Mr. Henry Burne had been removed from the office of Police Magistrate, for having improperly imprisoned two persons; he had been afterwards appointed to Araluen, the Government considering that the time he had been out of employment had been sufficient punishment for the wrong he had done.

A petition from the gold-miners of the Rocky River was received.

Petitions from Mrs. Nowland, and Mr. Thomas Lord, and others, were ordered to be printed.

Mr. Gararty moved the adjournment of the House, in order to draw the attention of the Government to the slaughtering that now took place in the city, greatly to the danger of the health of the inhabitants.

Mr. Lucas, in seconding the motion, remarked upon the necessity for amendment of the present law, under which it was necessary that the police should see the beasts slaughtered before an information could be laid.

laid.

Mr. Man'ix was quite alive to the importance of the matter, and a bill was in course of preparation, one clause of which would remedy the evil complained of, by imposing a penalty on persons who allowed sheep to be taken into their premises.

The motion was put and negatived.

Bills to regulate the Volunteer Force, and to consolidate and amend the Postal laws, were brought in and read a first time.

The Dedicated Crown Land Resumption Bill was read a second time and passed through committee.

The House adjourned at 27 minutes past 4 o'clock, until 3 o'clock on Tuesday. antil 8 o'clock on Tuesday.

The division on a question in a legislative body is not always an index of its exact opinion. The large majority on one of the most doubtful acts of the Administration may be ascribed to many causes besides satisfaction with the ex-planations given. We believe, however, one thing may be assumed,—that a great majority of the Legislature uphold the claim of the Ministers to be sole advisers of the GOVERNOR the appointment and dismissal of servants of the State; that they are the final judges of when and how exercise these functions of the Executive. this view we fully concur. Questions of civility are matters of taste. We cannot measure unare matters of taste. We cannot measure uncertain quantities. Mr. MARTIN intimated that he might have been more courteous than his colleague in similar circumstances.

public, as it is not pretended that any language rations will see nothing to complain of in the was used not proper to express the course condition of the present. Whoever will look pursued.

The assertion of the rights of the Executive was the duty of the Government when they were distinctly called in question. In doing so there may have been small mistakes of form and asperities of tone not to be imitated, but this may be always expected. Every Minister of State is not a polite letter writer. These defects are for remark, not formal condemnation.

For our part, we cannot see anything to com-plain of in the form that may not be found in the substance of this correspondence. There are some potions that even a jewelled cup would not render agreeable. Glad should we not render agreeable. Glad should we be, could we hope that the difficulty could be settled by verbal corrections. could be settled by verbal corrections.

The estensible point at issue is a very important one. The Government removes a public servant without stating why. Was he a Civil servant? The answer is differently given by the two Ministers. If he was not, then the Government had not to deal with him, but those wh sent him. The failure was then with the head of his Church, who had sent the wrong man. Then the nature of that failure ought to have been stated to the head of the Church. If, however, he was a Civil servant-if his sppointment was personal, his salary paid to himself—then he was entitled to all the protection of that position. The instructions given to the Covernor are law to him. They soy he may remove an officer, without reason first given; but two of these reasons must be given in writing to the officer as soon as possible, and his defence heard before he is dismissed. and his defence heard before he is dismissed. That is the law—and it may be invoked by any person aggrieved, in the Queen's Courts at Home. It is a good law; it is a reservation of the Imperial Parliament in favour of the Queen for the sake of the people; it will never cease to be the law so long as the Crown is recognised in this country. recognised in this country.

The case then seems to be in a very close compass. The information conveyed to the Government by Mr. Mann made it right to re ove Mr. Dillon - true or false, just or erroneous - the case admitted of no delay; but if as a Civil servant, have no doubt he he ought to have been informed, and heard in self-vindication; or if he was a mere instrument of his Church—a delegate—a journeyman, as we may say, to describe more clearly the position-then those who undertook the work to which he was sent, as representing them, ought to have been told of his specific unfitness. We do not think the veracity of these gentle-men could be a proper question in the debate. A Government must take the word of the head officials of the departments against all the world, or dismiss them, But had Mr. Dillos been called upon for a defence, the question of veracity would have formed a part of it. That he was prevented from raising it is a part of his grievance. But then who does not see the weight of the difficulty? The convicts themselves would have been brought in to the trial. They would have been partisans of Mr. MANN or They would soon have claimed the advantage of this new position, and it would require a very long time to get rid of the evils of such a discussion. In the perplexities of such a case there is no clear course, but in the spirit of conciliation. He must be greatly prejudiced who does not confess that the dismissal of a Civil servant without cause assigned is, as a rule, utterly indefen-sible, or who does not admit that there are special considerations to be regarded when the discipline of a penal establishment is concerned When Me MARTH told the Vican-General, the cause of this dismissal, the practical injustice was so far obviated. But we have no doubt that this gentleman held it to be his duty to guard the supposed rights of his (horch. We see this anxiety in the several cases now before the House. He could not fail o comprehend that "appointment" and dismissal" must belong to one and the same authority; that they drew after them the right of judging of fitness, and that whoever had these prerogatives held the reins. Sooner or later these questions of right, long managed by a good understanding was inevitable. The moment it was formally raised it would have to be decided. So far as it can be determined by the Legislature, it has been resolved in favour of the Executive. We regret that these difficulties should meet the ARCHBISHOP on his landing. guess, but this we do know,—that his long residence has been distinguished for prudence and gentleness: that he has the residence has been distinguished for prudence and gentleness; that he has the warm regard of many not of his Communion. For more than thirty years he has discouraged the quarrels of people who have brought with them the passions and prejudices of a state of them the passions and prejudices of a state of society hitherto unknown here, perhaps now never to be banished. If it is possible to con-ciliate the rights of Government with the rules which propagate a spirit certainly not exactly Christian. we short notice which appeared in our issue of Wednesday in reflation to pauperism and crime, presents alarming figures. By analysis we should probably deepen the impression of that mischief which is continually extending among us. At the same time it would present some facts allowing of a more mitigated view. It was one of the great evils attenupon the convict system that there descended from it upon the public revenue, and indeed apon the community in every form a vast amount of mischief not at first visible. The old, the infirm, the wicked, left without relatives, without resources, and many prematurely broken down and diseased, were the inevitable legacy of such a system. Besides which the convict eaven penetrated far and wide throughout colo nial society, and aggravated those evils which always accompany an abnormal condition where the relations of life are only half formed, or where they are liable to be broken by vice, by crime, and by misfortune.

of his Church, we are quite sure he will do

When, however, we look at the pauperism which exists among us in comparison with older communities, we are tempted to believe that it is rather an inevitable burden than a reult of public mismanagement. In Great Britain the proportion of paupers who are a continual charge is very frightful. In one view it is the more depiorable, since it often there results from the fierce battle for life. Population exceeds the resources of the people. Emigraexceeds the resources of the people. Emigration itself tends to aggravate the burdens of those who are left behind. The vast and complicated relations of British commerce render it liable to sudden suspension, and the com-binations by which the laws of political economy are violated aggravate the mis-chief, coming in commonly when the trade of the country is embarrassed from foreign causes. Not, indeed, that the poverty of England or Ireland is worse now than in former

Those who turn to the records of past gene-into the social condition of England, even as embraced in a period so late as in "Knight's London," will see abundant reason to be satisfied that there is an onward progress, and that wretched as multitudes are they are not so hopelessly forsaken as in those dark days. The picture drawn by Goldnot so hopelessly forsaken as in those dark days. The picture drawn by Goldsmith of the happy state of things "when every rood of ground maintained its man" was a poetical flight, certainly not sustained by any extended experience. There were, however, probably in those days more openings for vagrant forms of life. There were commons and creampments. There were spots sacred to vice and crime, where there were privileges permitted which the law does not now suffer. There were doles of bread given with less ir quiry, and consequently the interference of law has in some degree limited the perquisites of the mendicant. But upon the whole the condition of the pauper was miserable, and the numbers who were such as great compared with the population as at the present time

We have a right to look at these facts in view of the paperism which prevails among us. It may suggest that we shall have to deal with this mulady of society for all time to come, or so long as men are improvident, or the casualties of life expose them to distress. We have more than once recommended a stringent inquiry into the causes and subjects of pauperism. We believe that this would be one of the most essential steps towards the abatement of the evils which exist among us. Let the Legislature ascertain from what sources this ever-flowing evil is supplied? What have been the habits of the persons who are a burden on society?—how far the evils are the result of vice, and how far of misfortune;
-how many there are whose course of life is leading to that condition where there is no reby the public bounty? Ignorance of the sources of pauperism will prevent any effective methods of cure. It appears that there are 1500 children who are supported entirely by public charity. The causes of their dependence are very different, and we suspect that the existence of such asylums tends to weaken the sense of parental responsibility in many. They leave their children for whom their affections are not strong, without remorse, under the consciousness that they will be better taken care of than by themselves.

It is not to be disputed that in the performance of this task society will find its recompense. There is no form of charity on which the public is disposed to look with a less jealous eye than that which rescues miserable children from the influence of bad example and gives them a chance for life. In viewing their condition a sense of common humanity overpowers the re-pugnance to bear burdens which parental love ought to have borne. We know that of those who have descreted their children or left them to the public charge are unworthy of toleration; but the children themselves may by their future course indemnify society for the care which it has bestowed.

The heavy burdens thrown upon a commu nity by crime will, we hope, in a pecuniary sense, be ultimately abated. The work of the prisoners ought to be sufficent, in a country where labour is valuable, to pay all the expens of their maintenance. It requires considerable adaptation, both of the places where prisoners are kept, and of the discipline unthey are governed to assure this result. There are only two motions by which human nature can be influenced: by hope, and by fear. When any advantage can be set before the prisoner to-stimulate his labour, he may be led into habits of industry, and so cure that worst of seeds vices of the treat of self. that worst of social vices, often the parent of all others—werse even than drunkenness. The drunkard may be reclaimed, but the idle man must always be a shuffler, a pauper, or a thief. Work is the great instrument appointed by Infinite Wisdom for the correction as well as for the happiness of mankind. To follow this divine rule is the wisest course that can be of prison discipline sink into insignificance when compared with this. Men who work, in-sensibly improve. They acquire in their habits of industry not only one great means of master-ing their evil passions, but habits by which temptetions to dishonesty are abated and

Pauperism, however, will require an organiration far more effective both for the manage-ment of Government institutions, and those of a more private nature. The most important step towards this effective control would be the constitution of a commission composed of the persons most active in these institutions to sift the causes of destitution, pauperism, and crime; to suggest means by which the many charities which exist should co-operate to one end; to follow up the persons who receive charity with counsel and aid, and to check the impositions of those who are always preying upon the com-munity. The institution in New York, described in a late issue, for this purpose, was a grand instrument of reform. It secured a far closer attention to the real wants of the distressed and miserable, and threw off multitudes whose predatory pauperism was indeed but a form o

TRIEGHAPHIC PRIVATE MESSAGES.—A deputation from the Sydney Chamber of Commerce, consisting of hesers. Seul Samuel, J. 5. Willis, John Algor, and Shepherd Smith, waited by appointment upon the Postmanter-General yesterday, on the subject of the transmission of private messages by telagram between Great Britain and the honogenistic and the honogenistic states of the honogenistic states and the Australian colonies. It was pointed out to the honogenistment what inconvenience had arisen by the present mode of sending such messages. The Postmaster-General attended with much interest to the representations of the deputation, and then intimated to them that the matter was under the consideration of the Government with a view to the establishment of a system by which it could be carried out satisfactorily to the public. NEWSPAPER FOSTAGE ACT.—In the course of the short debate which took place in the Lagislative Assembly yesterday, or the bill to consolidate and assemd the laws relating to the Post Office, Mr. Burns saked the Colonial Treasurer whether the Government intended to instroduce a bill this session to repeal the Newspaper Postage Act, as that Act had been confessedly a failure as a measure of revenue—while the Colonial Secretary, Mr. Farkes, when in Opposition, had promised to bring in a bill to repeal the Act. Mr. Eagar declined to answer the question until he made his financial statement. It is believed by many persons that the Government would have but little objection to the repeal of this Act.

A Nova: THISTE EXTRANSATOR—An enthusiastic correspondent claims to have made a discovery of importance. He writes from 'Bash Hut,' as follows.—"It out he stated on the best authority that greese—the common barupard goose—is the best thistic extripator pet produced. Not a few machines have been brought into notice for exterminating thistises. Acts of Parliament have been peased, rewards offered, and penaltics inflicted, while all the time the few grees allowed to live in the colony were doing more practically to exterminate the thisties than legislators and the authorities consbined. On the motion of Mr. WHITE, the petition presented by him on the list July last, from Mrs. Harriette Now-land, was ordered to be printed.

On the motion of Mr. MACPHERSON, it was endered that the petition, presented by him on 26th July, from Thomas Lord and others, proprietors and inhabitants of the south side of George's River, having access to Sydney by the punt to Tom Ugly's Peint, setting forth that they have no read to the punt except on a sufferance through Mr. Bol's preperly, which has caused great inconvenience to the petitionew, and praying that a cortain road, stated to have been surveyed during 1863, be proclaimed withoutlany unnecessary delay, be printed.

DIVORGE AND MATRIMONIAL CAUSES BILL.

Mr. HART moved that the Order of the Day for this day its months.

Mr. GAREETT seconded the motion, which was put and carried.

Its petitioners, and praying that a certain road, stated to law teen surveyed during 1850, be proclaimed without any mnecessary delay, be printed.

BY CREAT moved that the Order of the Day for the second reading of this bill be made an Order of the Day for the second reading of this bill be made an Order of the Day for the second reading of this bill.

MY. WINDEYER rose to move the second reading of this bill.

The SPEAKER said that the bill could not be proceeded with, as it was a measure calculated to interfere with tade, and cught to have originated in committee.

MY. WINDEYER suggested that the second reading of the bill being now an Order of the Day, the error was card. He also contended that the bill affected trade very slightly, and that there was hardly any measure which could be introduced which did not interfere with trade to some extent. He had been unable to discover how this bill and originated in England, but he saked whether as the bill he draw to deal with it.

The SPEAKER said that he had no doubt that at any period the bill could be stopped, but that the usual time for doing so was on the motion being made for its second reading. He can be examined, and as a matter of course there was no opportunity of noticing the bill could be examined, and as a matter of course there was no opportunity of noticing the bill could be examined, and as a matter of course there was no opportunity of noticing the bill could be represented that the bill did directly interfere with the trade to surve critical that the bill did directly interfere with the trade to surve critical the formal way.

Mr. PARKES moved that it was desirable to introduce a bill to regulate the Volunteer Force."

Mr. HART asked whether the representations made to the Government by certain members of the Volunteer Force had been taken into consideration in framing this bill:

Mr. PARKES said the representations in question had been casidered, and the more important of them had been included in the bill before the House. Many of the recommendation, however, were of that nature that they ought, if desirable, to be confined to the regulations. Those which were fit to be in the bill had been included. He had been given to understand by many members of the Volunteer Force that the bill was quite satisfactory to them.

The worker was then agreed to, the House resumed, the resolution was reported, read a first and second time, and adopted.

POSTAGE LAWS,
On the motion of Mr. EAGAR, the House went into committee, to consider the desirability of introducing a bill to consider and amend the laws relating to the Post Office.

Mr. EAGAR moved a resolution affirming the propriety of introducing such a bill

Mr. HAGAR made some reply, which was manager the gallery.

Mr. HART complained that he did not hear the answer firm by the Tressurer.

Mr. HAGAR said it was not usual, at this stage of the worselings, to go into the nature of a bill, but he might sais, that the object of the bill was to consolidate the lews nating tol the Post Office, and to make a few trifling amendments. He was not, however, sufficiently master of the details of the bill to give much information respecting it.

the details of the bill to give much information respecting it.

Mr. HART thought the hon, gentleman had no right to introduce a bill the details of which he was not acquainted with. He should be prepared to give information respecting it at this stage of the proceedings, as it was exactomary for Ministers to do under the circumstances.

Mr. MARTIN said it was not customary for the Government, when making a motion of this kind, to make any explanation of the details of the bill. It was regarded as a purely formal matter. This was a bill to consolidate the laws relating to the Post Office. It was also to give the Government power to assent to certain alterations which may be agreed upon by the Imperial authorities. The Government at present had not the power to carry out certain attentions.

Mr. THORNTON took this opportunity of asking the Colonial Treasurer whether in this bill he had provided for any alteration in the issue of stamus. At present that portion of the public who posted letters to be sent via Pannas suffered a good deal of inconvenience from having no fourpenny, enpenny, and twentypenny stamps. It would save a good deal of inconvenience if stamps of those several values were issued.

Mr. EAGAR said this was purely a matter of regulation. If the Postmaster General saw it was desirable to issue stamps of such reveals that those issued at present, it was in his power to issue them.

Mr. BURNS saked the Colonial Treasurer, without notice, whether it was the intention of the Government to introduce a bill this ression to repeal the Newspaper Postage Act; He felt sure that the Colonial Secretary was in favour of a repeal of that Act, because when in Opposition he premised to introduce a bill to effect that object. The Act had confersedly been a failure as regarded the revenue that was expected from it.

Mr. KAGAR said he could not answer this question until he made his financial statement.

The motion was then put and passed.

The House returned, and the resolution was received and agreed to.

Mr. KAGAR brought up the bill, which was read a first time, and the recond reading fixed an order of the day for Wednesday neat.

ST. ANDREW'S CATHEDRAL CLOSE.

The Order of the Day for the second reading of St. Andrew's Cathedral Close Bill was postponed to Wednesday neat.

DEDICATED CROWN LANDS' RESUMPTION.

Mr. WILSON moved the second reading of the bill to make provision for the Resumption of Crown Lands dedicated for Public Purposes. The hone, gentleman said the lands to which this bill referred were certain lands which had been dedicated, and in almost every case applications had been received to have them changed for same others. Hon, members would see, by referring to the 6th clause of the Land Act, that the only was the second reading of the bill in detail.

Mr. WILSON moved that the first c

If defendant was so violent, the polico cagit to have put him in confinement or taken him in a dray. If their conduct was not brutal it was taniamount to it. The Bench thought, under any circumstances, the police were not justified in using the violence they did. No doubt the police had trouble with the defendant, but it was no excuse for grossly abusing him.

Sin. —I observe that Mr. Macleay is reported to have said in the House leat night, "all the credit for getting the New South Wales section of the Exhibition in good order was given to Mr. Moore, who was represented as having worked from morning to night, while the other Commissioners, Captain Mayne and Mr. Montelore, were seldom there except when they had to meet some distinguished individuals, &c." Now, as it is quite possible that Mr. Macleay's assertion may be believed in some outlying districts, and as I am desirous that my follow-colomists should know the truth, I challenge Mr. Macleay to give me the names of his authority for his unfounded assertion. I can state positively that during the short four weeks allowed for the arrangement of the New South Wales section, my brother, Mr. Mavand Montelfore, was continually at work at the Exhibition building at 6 o'clock in the morning, and often until late at night; that in consequence of Mr. Moore, want of knowledge of the French language, all the contracts for work were made by my brother, and all directions to workman given by him, and that his labour and time have been freely and cheerfully given to advance the interests and position of the colony with which various members of his family have been so long connected.

Sin,—Your sizus from Saturday's Mail, contains the following words: "Perhaps Mr. Joubert would scarcoly predict acrop of 100 tone per acro. There would not be space upon the scre for such a crop to mature."

In endeavouring to bring forward a new and valuable industry, which I feel comfident will ere long preve a boost to the colony, I have to contend against the prejudice and incredulity of many. It is therefore with the most this subject. I am aware that of all things to be avoided, cangeration is the foremest.

I toid you that in this colony "Silesian beet" had pieled 20 tone per acre, and that Mr. J. Manning had ascertained the fact of 100 tone per acre being easily obtained by oarly or winter sowing. When I made the statement I was aware that the thing had been proved at home—and I knew that a statement made by Mr. James Manning needed ne corroboration wower, that you are one of the "Replies," I leg that you will be good amough to judge for yourself and ramine a few "Detey," which had been proved at the real of the common course of busbandry, and as large plots must be cultivated, where sent to me this morning from Pambula, together with a tetter from Mr. James Manning, which you may as well read.

Sir,—Your correspondent "S" to-day formishes you with a copy of a letter sent to him a short time ago by a triend; and curiously crough, I have myself received by post this afternoon a copy (apparently lithographed) of the same effusion. It is, however, infortunately anonymous. It would have been a great advantage to know who it is that, in conjunction with Sir Heajamin brodie, discovered "intrate of sliver" as an infallible preventive of hydrophobia. "Brodie and i acted on it." Who is "I?" it is lid to sake; and how is it that Sir Benjamin Brodie has not the life of the same of the same of the life of the same celumns, will, I trust, before this, have the question in your celumns, will, I trust, before this, have the question in your printed circular and memorandum which I now enclose respecting the reige for hydrophobia known as the "Briling cure." I had long known of this, but having become vicar of the parish, I made it my business to institute an inquiry into the results actually obtained, with the view of making an appeal to the public to buy the secret if it appeared that this was desirable.

FOR AUGUST. I'm must be remembered that the directions contained in the calendar apply to the county of Cumberland generally. It will be readily understood that in so limited a space it would be simply impracticable to prepare a calendar suitable to the whole colony embracing as it does so great a variety of climates. With slight variations, however, which will readily suggest themselves to any practical person or amateur, the directions may be modified so at to suit the local preulisrities of other districts.

MONTHLY REMARKS.

The weather during the past month (with the exception of the last three or four days) has been more like spring than winter, and in many places deciduous trees have retained their leaves to the present time—a circumstance we never remember to have witnessed before. This mild weather, however, has had the effect of bringing on young crops very rapidly, and cereals sown since the flood are perhaps more advanced, and certainly in much better condition, than those crops which had to withstand the violence of the storm, or rather, we should say, those which escaped destruction from the flood.

We were much pleased to observe, during recent visit to some of our grazing districts, that artificial grasses are gaining favour year by year. Five or six years ago it was very unusual to meet with such a thing as a paddock laid down with a foreign grass, unless indeed nature had performed the operation; but now such paddocks are to be met with in all direc-Kiama, and Shoalhaven a very large proportion of the land is laid down, and although the original pastures in these districts were always considered rich, still their stock carrying capabilities have been enhanced to a wonderfu extent of late years by the introduction of artifical grasses. Of all that have been tried artineal grasses. Or all that have been theu the perennial rye grass appears to be the favourite, and there is perhaps more land laid down with this grass than all the other grasses put together. We would, however, strongly recommend graziers and others, who intend improving their pastures, not to overlook the claims of other species, and of these we may mention as ranking very high the Cocksfoot (Dactylis Glomerata). This grass has been grown pretty extensively, and during the past two years considerable parcels of the seed have been grown and saved in the colony, and it is a highly designable, species for high the latest the colony. highly desirable species for high dry land, withstanding as it has done the severe droughts of the past few years. The Californian prairie grass, which was so great a favourite some years since, is falling somewhat in the estima-tion of many; for, although it yields an immense amount of fodder, some complain that butter produced from it has a very pale colour. Should, however, this complaint be well grounded, still we think this grass should not be scarded. There are also the fescues of sorts including meadow, red, hard, and sheep's, which have successfully withstood the long dry and hot summers of the past two or three years. Couch grass and white clover have become so thoroughly acclimatised that they are almost looked upon as indigenous, and are to be met with in nearly every settled district throughout the colony. The rib grass, meadow foxtail, meadow grass, and timothy grass are also valuable additions to our pastures, and have proved themselves worthy of a place. The great advantage in mixing grasses is that, as far as possible, all seasons may be provided for, as no single species can be expected to supply fodder throughout the year in so trying a climate as ours, with its burning sun, scorching winds, with cold and rain alternately. Thus we would recommend in every case a mixture which should be varied according to the nature of the land. We draw attention to this subject at this particular season because if persons will take the trouble to watch through the spring and summer months they will readily be able to determine from comparison those grasses which are most likely to succeed in the localities they desire to improve.

The seasonable showers which have fallen during the past few days have been very bene-ficial to all farming, and gardening operations, and more particularly so to newly planted grounds, these showers have also very much improved the condition of the soil and rendered it all that could be desired for planting, which operation should now be pushed on with the utmost vigour, trees and plants have also received a check through the cold weather which has now continued some days which will harden them and render them less liable to injury whils being removed or transplanted, in fact from ap pearances the winter has only now commenced, as up to the end of the third week in July, the weather was exceedingly mild, even during the dreadful rains, which fell at the beginning of the

The past has been a busy month, but very few improvements are being carried out, restor-ing order has been the chief work, and this in many instances has been no easy task, a large number of persons who had intended making improvements have been deterred from carrying them out from various causes arising more or less out of the late floods, in some instances, land which had been prepared by trenching was completely swept away to the depth of the trench leaving nothing but the undisturbed subsoil. Other soils again were so battered and puddled that they will require to be gone over again before planting can be gone on with. This is especially the case where drain-ing has not been properly attended to.

PIELD.

Ploughing should now be carried on vigorously, as the land is in splendid condition, and even if it is not intended to put in a summer crop, the labour will not be lost, as by plough ing now the land will be greatly improved, an if possible it should be cross ploughed in the summer once or twice, as each time the plough goes a little deeper which makes a crop much more certain and very materially increases the Grass seeds may still be sown, but on ploughed land only, otherwise the chances are ten to one against success.

ten to one against success.

It is a great object to get the tobacco crop in early. A thoroughly-sheltered warm spot should therefore be selected, and the seeds sown in finely-prepared beds, which must be well protected from frosts by erecting a small shed over the beds, and covering it with bushes, calico, or some such material. Water slightly, should the weather prove dry, and look well after slugs and other vermin as the plants begin to make their appearance.

Potatoes may also be sown, but in very warm, sheltered localities only, where no danger from frost need be apprehended.

Maize and sorghum may be sown towards the end of the month, but such sowings should only take place in warm situations, and hardly so even there, unless the weather promises well.

Sow field peas, beans, and carrots largely; the seed of the latter, however, should be of first-rate quality, and imported any other is first-rate quality, and imported; any other is very apt to run at this season.

very apt to run at this season.

Continue to top-dress pastures; it is a good plan where no regular dressing is available to procure a suitable bush, and have it drawn by a horse over pastures for the purpose of breaking up and distributing cow and horse droppings over the surface. Shortly after rain is the best time to do this, as the droppings are more easily broken and scattered than when dry and Liquid manure may also be applied to small paddocks with great advantage. This may either be conveyed through an ordinary guttapercha pipe or in such carts as are used for watering streets.

FRUIT GARDEN AND ORCHARD. The showers which fell towards the end of last month have been very beneficial to this department, both as regards old plantations and lose in course of formation, the present cold weather has also put back young trees, and will weather has also put back young trees, and will have the effect of rendering them safe to transplant for a much longer period than we anticipated a fortnight ago; planting should therefore be pushed on with all possible expedition. Orange, lemon, citron, lime, shaddock, guava, loquat, banana, plantain, cherimoyer, and such like should be firmly staked and sheltered by placing a good bush or two to each as placing a good bush or two to each as a protection from frost and cold cutting winds, these bushes should be removed as soon as all danger from frost has passed away, Con-tinue planting all kinds of hardy deciduous fruit trees, such as apple, pear, peach, apricot, nec-tarine, plum, cherry, fig, quince, chestnut, almond, walnut, filbert, mulberry, medlar, gooscberry, currant, raspberry, &c.; firmly stake all trees as soon after planting as pos-

Pruning of every kind should be completed with as little delay as possible, and digging and manuring should immediately follow. Vines should receive their dressing at once, and all old stakes be replaced. Dress and manure strawberry plantations; new plantations may still be formed, but strong plants should be selected, as the season is rather late.

A good remedy for the American blight is a as made by dissolving soft soap in water, about two pounds to the gallon (rain water is the best); this wash may be applied to the diseased parts with an ordinary painter's brush. Gishurst compound is also found to keep down this pest; it may be applied in the same way as the soft soan, only one pound to the called as the soft soap, only one pound to the gallon of water will be sufficient. This will also be found efficacious in destroying scale and other vermin on all kinds of fruit trees. It should be applied either carlo in the manifest of the control of the control of the control of the control of the carlo of the control of th applied either early in the morning or late in the evening; as if applied during the heat of the liage of evergreen trees would be injured thereby.

Gather orange and lemon, and it required for exportation spread out the fruit one deep only on dry boards in an open shed protected from sun, dew, or rain. The fruit should be turned once in every twenty-four hours for about ten days, when it may be packed up in boxes with holes bored every few inches, in thoroughly dried grass hay. If treated in this way, the fruit will keep for months. The gathering, however, must be conducted very carefully, as any bruise or break in the rind would cause any bruise or break in the rind would cause decay, and one rotten fruit would soon destroy a whole case. Continue to stir the surface of the soil with horsehoe or scarifier.

KITCHEN GARDEN.

Great care should be exercised in the selection of seeds for sowing this month; all colonial saved being very apt to run in the spring, particularly carrot, turnip, cabbage, parsnip, &c. Much loss and disappointment is frequently experienced through persons procuring colonial seeds at this season, they should therefore be particular in seeing that they sow nothing but the best European seeds particu-larly those kinds noted above.

Prepare beds well protected from frost, and sowearly cucumbers, melons, vegetable marrows, &c., keep up the temperature in hot-beds by dressings of hot dung.

Sow peas, and beans of sorts, cabbage carrot, parsnip, turnips, lettuce, radish, celery, parsley, mustard, cress, and herbs of all sorts, plant and thin out as required, sow for succession crop, cauliflower and brocoli of sorts, sow onions and leeks, and plant or thin out plant potatoes, rhubard, asparagus, globe and Jerusalem artichokes, sweet potatoes, and seakale. Earth up advancing crops of potatoes, peas, beans, and such like. Sow Cape goose-berries, capsicums, and tomatoes, but these must be sown in finely prepared beds, well protected from frost, and cold cutting winds, keep down weeds, destroy insects, and attend to cleanliness throughout.

FLOWER GARDEN. This should be a busy month in this department, all kinds of bedding-out plants, including verbenas, geraniums, carnations, and picotees, fuchsias, antirrhinums, chrysanthemums, petu-nias, phlox, salvias, &c., should be planted out as soon as possible; continue to plant out all kinds of ornamental trees, shrubs, and flowering plants, including conifers of all sorts, mag-nolias, camellias, rhododendrons, azaleas, roses, &c. The weather is now all that could be desired, and the soil is in first-rate condition. All tender plants will still require proper pro-tection from cold winds and frosts. Stake all plants immediately after planting; bulbs of sorts (should any still be left) ought to be planted at once. Seeds of hardy annuals may be sown in finely prepared soil, and tender annuals may be sown in warm sheltered localities. Pruning should have been completed early last month, but should any still remain unfinished no further delay should take place. Manure where required should be dug in at once. Form and clip edgings and hedgerows. Pot plants will require attention, drainage should be examined, and larger pots supplied where necessary, or those intended to remain should be top-dressed those intended to remain should be top-dressed and liquid manure applied where necessary; this should be very weak until the plants are growing vigorously; if guano be used, half-pound to the gallon of water is a safe dressing. Continue to prepare land for planting, form and put in order walks, lawns, hedges, &c.; remove all unsightly trees and plants, and replace them without delay. The hot-house will require particular, attention during the present cold weather. Keep up fires and avoid leaving doors or sashes open too early in the morning; water carefully and in moderation.

The New Austrian Breech-Loader.—The Austrian correspondent of the Times gives the following account of the new breech-loading rifle selected by the Austrian Government. The arm is the invention of M. Werndl, of Steyr. Of the better known systems, it most resembles the "Peabody." It is remarkable for its simplicity and solidity. It may be said to consist of four pieces—the stock of beechwood, which reaches nearly up to the muzzle of the barrel; the barrel and backpiece of one piece of east steel; the lock, consisting of a wedge, with a groove over which the cartridge is slipped into the barrel, and which opens and shuts between the barrel and the backpiece; and fourthly, the trigger. The manipulation of the gun is easy; there are four motions in loading. After discharge, the thumb is pressed against a flat knob projecting on the left side of the gun, and the lock thrown open. By the same motion the discharged cartridge is extracted by a lever. Over a groove, which now appears in the wedge, a cartridge is slipped into the barrel by a second motion. By a third motion the wedge is thrown buck, and the breech locked, and the gun is then cocked. The gun may also be cocked by a first motion immediately after discharge. It is possible to fire twenty-four rounds in a minute. At 1200 yards a bullet from the "Werndi" will penetrate four mokes of deal board.

THE DIVISION ON THE REDISTRIBUTION OF SEATS.—
The Daily Telegraph remarks that the value of the decision pronounced yesterday is in the fact that it clears the ground and supplies the Government with the broader basis. The Herald says the Government may now honourably accept the charge of proposing a scheme for the disposition of some dozen seats more than it had ventured to ask for. The Standard cannot think that Miniaters will find it difficult to acquiesce in the decision of the House, and still less does it regret the decision itself. The Star says last night's division establishes conclusively that the Government have entirely lost the control of their Reform Bill.

The cruel flogging of coolies on the tea plantations of Assam formed the subject of a parliamentary paper lately published. From that document it appeared that the chief offenders had been subjected only to a nominal punishment, and that there was an absence of that strict magisterial supervision which was indispensable to the just treatment of the coolies. Before he left office Lord Cranborne addressed a vigorous despatch to the [Governor-General on the subject, reprobating these cruelties in the strongest language, and directing the appointment of an additional magistrate.

A TRAGEDY IN OLDEN TIMES AT THE CHATHAMS.

A TRAGEDY IN OLDEN TIMES AT THE CHATHAMS.

The Chatham Island correspondent of the Haske's Boy Herold writes:—

Some where towards the close of 1836 a tragedy occurred on this island, which is still the theme of conversation sround native iresides, and ancient Maories will illustrate the tale by showing traces of fearful wounds received in sanguinary conflict. On a bright aummer's day, the French whaling berque Jean Burt, of Havre, put into Waitangi Bay to procure a supply of vegetables and fresh provisions. She rode under envy sail, and, as usual on such occasions, a number of Maories of both sexes put off to the vessel and crowded her deck, fraternising most cordially with the strangers. Eventually, however, a quarrel ensuch between two of the boat-steerers, caused by a strange fresk of jealousy. One of the Maori women especially attracted their attention, and to one of those men the dusky charmer gave a most flattering preference. This so enraged the disappointed suitor that he seized a whaling lance, and in another moment the poor girl lay at his feet a mangled corpse. Upon witnessing the great cruel murder, a Maori in the act of rushing down the companion way to inform the captain, receiving a thrust from the same weapon, fell dead upon the floor. This was the signal for a general onslaught, but the unfortunate Maories, almost all unarmed, could make but little resistance opposed to thirty fierce Frenchmen wielding long and sharplances, and fearful was the massacre. About twenty-eight Maories, all young and slawart men, were killed, and many desperately wounded. In this fearful emergency, however, Toenga, Maitora, and seven or eight as bold and setermined as themselves, forced an entrance into the cabin, the doors of which were fastened upon them and securely barricaded. From the skylight windows the Frenchmen thrust at them with their lances, inflicting severe wounds. Utilimately, however, however, Toenga, Maitora, and seven or eight as bold and setermined as themselves, forced an entrance into the each, she was eventually run ashore at Ocean Bay, and burnt.

The sequel now remains to be told. Shortly after this catastrophe, an American whaler, the Rebecca Sima, arrived at Waitangi, and the whole affair was made known. She was then on her way so the Bay of Islands, and at the Bay fell in with a brig which had been fitted out by the French Government at Otsheiti as a discovery ship. To the commander the American captain reported the melancholy tidings, and it was mutually arranged that the Rebecca Sims should accompany the discovery ship to the island. Accordingly the two vessels soon made their appearance at Waitangi, and the Maories, unsuspicious as to her character or errand, and crowding on board, were received by armed sailors and marines, and detained as prisoners. After this the Frenchmen landed, but the inhabitants having disappeared, they contented themselves by burning the pah and inflicting the utmost injury they could. At that time a white man resided on the island who understood and spoke the Maori language fluendy. Availing himself of this man's services as interpreter, the French commander, after investigating the affair, informed the Maories that he had burnt their oah and Arailing himself of this man's services as interpreter, the French commander, after investigating the affair, informed the Maories that he had burnt their pah and taken their property as payment for the Jean Bart; that his anger was now over; and he hoped they would be kind to all strangers. He then gave them food, made them a few presents, and sent them ashore. Thus ended this terrible affair; but to this day the Chatham Island Maories have an insurmountable dread of the "Oui, Oui."

OUR MERCHANT SEAMEN.—CERTIFICATES FOR LONG AND SHORT VOYAGES.

OUR MERCHANT SEAMEN.—CERTIFICATES FOR LONG AND SHORT VOYAGES.

(From the Nautical Magazine for April.)

While there are thousands of well-educated officers in the British Merchant Service who are an honour to the profession, yet the fact cannot be denied that a large number of our masters and mates are little better than able seamen as regards intelligence and education. As was shown in the March number of this magazine, the qualifications demanded of candidates for certificates of competency for the inferior grades are so very low, that any seaman possessing the mercet rudiments of nautical knowledge may pass the examinations. In consequence of this state of things the supply of officers far exceeds the demand, and we have a large number of passed masters and mates in want of employment, who offer their services at low rates and prevent abler men from obtaining situations, which their superior attainments enable them to fill with credit. Were the inferior grades of officers restricted to the smaller class of vessels trading in the Atlantic and the narrow seas, and were the larger class of vessels trading to the East of the Cape of Good Hope and to the West of the Horn, commanded and officered exclusively by men holding first mates' and extra masters' certificates, the service would improve in every respect, for good officers almost invariably make good crews. There are many experienced shipmasters who hold only certificates of service: these remarks are not intended to apply to them, but to the younger members of the profession.

According to the present state of the law, an only mate may be appointed to a ship of the largest size trading to India or China, and, as the name of the grade indicates, a second mate cannot be carried in the same ship; so that the shipowner gets an inferior officer, who is not qualified to succeed the master in the event of illness or death, and the second mate is compelled to serve nominally as boatswain, although actually performing second mate for or welve months as second mate b the difficulties arising from the attraction of in the compasses, render it imperative that comms of these ships should have a special knowled magnetism. As long ago as the year 1855, Sceresby urged the necessity of this, and isno have increased largely since that time.

Besides his nautical education, a shipmaster may be should be should be should be some knowledge, best means of preserving the health of his crew, rarely happens that cases of sourcy occur on bose well-found ships commanded by intelligent men, generally on board of ships where cleanlines wentilation are neglected and bad provisions are set out. There is, however, one cause of scurry as health on board ship, to which Mr. Lach and or who have written on the subject have not attached weight,—that is, a loathsome disease contracted the men while in port. A consider proportion of the scurry cases which are sent to hospitulas are induced by this disease. At the bearing of almost every voyage there are a number of men unfit for duty through their own folly thoughtlessness while in port. A greatest have done lately to improve our seamen, while our ofth have been somewhat neglected. A writer in magazine observes that "a seaman's home is ship." Home influences are always most powe either for good or evil, and any attempts to impet the seaman without improving the officer can hu succeed. und the Bra below and the beauty to the beau ander the Great Seal of the colony, having, in obedience to the instructions conveyed to us, proceeded to the town of Braids ood and there made full and diligent inquiry into all the matter entrusted to us, have the honour to submit the following report:—

In accordance with your Excellency's instructions, our inquiries were firstly directed to the conduct of the local magistracy, and as the well-ordering of a community so much depends upon the proper administration of justice and the character of these who are suppowered to significate, the very gravest consideration has been given to this matter. We believe the magistrates in this district have generally been attentive to their duties, though some have had better opportunities of endering, flectual service than others. At the raum time, we consider that the discretionary powers of magistrates in the granting of bail, have not been wisely exceeded in any serious case brought before this Beach. Under the esting state of the district, too great or a cannot be taken lest the ends of justice should, by such means, he defeated. The conduct of one magistrate, however, we fiel complicit to except. Statements affecting the character and standing of Mr. Revealed Hase all as a magistrate have been made to us in evidence; and those attements have, to a great extent, been confirmed by his own admissions, lie has retrained from taking any open or active part against the burbrangers or their associates, to preserve havely and the submit of the public.

We consider that the public houses in the district are not associates, but more especially when the prevalency of submits of the public.

We consider that the public houses in the district are not aspecially a serviced that strict and proper control over his men requises at hil times, but more especially under circumstances demanding the strictest direcipline on the part of the police bree.

It is further disclosed that improper intimacy and familiarity have existed between members of the police force and cer ain a uncettons of the bushrangers. Such imperprise are, in our opinion, greatly to be deprecated, at the efficiency of the force must be thereby impaired and the cot adders of the public destroyed. The superintendent would seen to be unaware of such proceedings; and we made loss to understand how he could have remained in ignorance of irregularities occurring in a part of the district under his immediate observation.

The failure of the police to capture the autlaw Clarks and the other off-anders presently associated with him may be attributed to the following causes:

The insufficiency of the police, the nature of the country, and the chareter of the residents.

We consider that, at the outbreak of bushranging, more afficient and energetic steps could have been fame, had the applications of the superintendent for additional reen been empled with. Police stations could have been formed in the vicinity of the bushrangers' haunts, and their apprehension probably reflected before they had callisted the publics, employed upon special day, in parent of Lunamers, can be there and for their capture. No police publics, employed upon special day, in parent of Lunamers, can be thorough the fact the policy in the district than they have hitherto been.

The Superintendent of Police, being hald responsable for the meintanene of good order in the district under his describes from head quarters in Sydney.

The Eusperintendent of Police, being hald responsable for the meintanene of good order in the district under his describes from head quarters in Sydney.

It is, is our opinion, unadvisable to retain at the depot in hydrey, for the purposes of instruction, men joining the solice force and intended for the country districts; the distinguishment of the country districts; the country districts; the country districts; the country districts; the country districts are distinguishment of the district of the district a the district the men are intended for, wanous involving as of time, and better fitting them for the duties they are silled upon to revform.

A feeling of jealousy undoubtedly existed between the sides and the special party accredited by the Government, suiting in a want of co-operation, which must have militied against the success of both. We are of opinion that is itempedient to employ any such party in a district rithout the knowledge of the Superintendent in charge, who should be acquainted with their course of action.

The subject of the munders of John Carroll and the other special constables is now under judicial investigation, and so facts have been elicited in the course of this inquiry which, in our opinion, would assist in the prosecution. There can be but little doubt that Carroll and his party relation much on the assistance of persons strongly suspected of being in league with the bushrangers, and to this the disastrons consequences that ensued may be mainly stitutured.

The circumstances attanding the first interment of the stributed.

The circumstances attending the first interment of the bedies of these unfortunate men have been inquired into by u; and we do not consider that any blame is to be attached as the outh white concerned. Although it might have been more advisable to have provided coffins from Braidwood, in the first it is altered, yet all proper steps seems to have been taken to resure decent burial with the means available on the tree.

as first iterance, yet all proper steps seems to have been takes to resure decent burial with the means available on the spot.

The country usually known as Jingera, in which the tashnapers are principally harboured, is of a most impacticable character. It is of very large extent, sparsely spullated, and requiring considerable experience before that inowled; can be obtained necessary to enable the police to at effectively. The tashabitants chiefly consist of small shabolders, who do not cultivate smallestify for their support; and the evidence shows that whilst the young men have opportunities of earning an honest livelihood, yet they wisces a gravier desire for an irregular mode of life than for idjustrious and steady pursuits. They thus become more effectively to be diffusences, and, commencing a career of simulations and steady pursuits. They thus become more effectible to bed influences, and, commencing a career of simulations and steady pursuits. They then become more effectible to bed influences, and, commencing a career of simulations and steady pursuits. They then become more effectible to bed influences, and, commencing a career of simulations are serious offences, ending in bushranging and marder. Such is the history of the cutils of Clarke, and, unfortunately, of many other criminals in this district. The can be but little doubt that the crime of bushranging has not its origin in want. None of the offenders at present intesting this district have that excuese. Crime should be arreated at its carliest stages. The sentences generally given we think far too lennent. Two cases steerally given we think far too lennent. Two cases steerally given we think far too lennent. Two cases (clares such as of the court in the other, a man convicted of a daring sentenced to be imprisoned for a far known, until the rising of the Court; in the other, a man convicted of a daring sentenced to be imprisoned for the court when at the sentence of toobstry under such as even make the total court of the court of the court of

There is in the Jingera district an entire absence of moral siling, education, and religious instruction; and to this in a great measure attribute the state of depravity which is a great measure attribute the state of depravity which et exists. There are no schools or teachers, and the sidests rarely see a minister of religion. They are for emot just closely connected by reletionship and inter-arrises with the bashrangers; and thus shelter and sistator, as well as information as regards the move-ents of the police, are almost everywhere available for the iminals. Even those residents who do not participate in a preceded of crime, or sympathies with effenders, manifecting their captures.

action, in accordance with the recommendations we have unde after carnest consideration, the district would ere long be restored to a state of order, and life and property would receive that protection which it is the duty of the Government to ensure.

But these measures must necessarily be accompanied by means of moral improvement in the community, without which no permanent good results can be expected.

ACCIDENT.—Mr. Alexander M'Lean, baker, of Redfern-street, Redfern, had a very parrow scape of losing his life last evening by being run over with a railway engine, at the Redfern terminus. Centrary to the regulations in was crossing the line of rails, for the purpose of taking a short cut over to the Cleveland Paddocks. The quarter-past 6 was coosing the line of rails, for the purpose of faking a short cut over to the Cleveland Faddocks. The quarter-pat 6 instance, Waip Was standing at the ricket distingut, the being shunted on to another line, when Mr. M'Loan by some means fell just in front of it. It was dark at the time, and therefore it was impossible for the engine-driver to see him, and even if he had done so he ould not have stopped the rapine in time to have prevented the accident. The noise made by the trains and other things prevented Mr. M'Lean's cries for assistance being heard, and several minutes elapsed before he was discovered in his dangerous position. Mr. M'Lean appears to have sustained no farther riphry then that already mentioned. Notwithstanding repeated warnings numbers of people make a practice of walking across the railway at the station to save few steps; and it is to be beped this accident will be the means of detering them from such foolish and dangerous practices for the future.

BNIPRTAINMENT.—An excellent entertainment, both of a livrary and musical character, was given last evening by the members of the Trinity Musical and Literary Instituts, in the Trinity Schoolroom, Lower Fort-street. A very numerous andlence was present. The first tiess on the programme—a solection from the opers of Martha—rax played on the planoforte by Mr. W. G. Broadhurst, in a meaner last would have done credit to a professol and. A sector from the first act of "The Stranger" was played by fair amateurs, who mastimed their characters very well and were loudy applanticed to be compared to the lastitute, Mr. Broadhurst again favoured the and issued to the playing the greatenan was warmly and deservedly applauded. Several very good soonge were sung during the evening, by members of the Institute, Mr. Broadhurst accompanying the vocalists on the plazoforts. The entertainment concluded with the lauphable farce of "The Martyr to Schenoe," a piece which storded finding to make the company brought the proceedings to a close. No. 1L WE might fairly test satisfied with the case w have already made out against the theory which traces the present redundance of crime in New South Wales, mainly, or in any marked degree, to the old leaven of convictism. Further objections to that theory might, however, be urged, founded on the personal history of the generality of our criminals. They are not for the most part men who "left their country for their country's good," nor the sons of such men. In truth, of the convicts who were transported hither from the the convicts who were transported hither from the mother country, the majority have died out leaving no representatives; while of those who became parents in the colony, a large proportion reared up their children right well and housestly. The present frightful growth of crime is chiefly among the young, and, we repeat it, not among those in whom it might be ascribed to a hereditary taint. The very nature of the crimes most alarmingly rampant among us marks them as indigenous. For instance, the bushranging of the last five or six years has very them as indigenous. For instance, the bush-ranging of the last five or six years has very little in common with the old high-way robberies of England, being far more nearly akin to the brigandage of Italian fuorosciti. And it is worth observing that, whereas few highwaymen and many pickpockets were transported hither, we have a large crop of bushrangers and comparatively few pickpockets. Again, cattle stealing and horse stealing were merely occasional phases of dishonesty in the old country, while here they are professions, taking their form from the special circumstances of the country, and developed by reckless legislation. And, to take the freshest example, our forgers are not like the men whom, till within our own memory, they used to hang in England, and of whom consequently very few found their way father; but in many cases petty rogues, who have seen but it many cases petty rogues, who have seen how easily paper passes in the rural districts, and forge an order to cheat a publican of his score, rob a store-keeper of his bill, or raise the wind on an expensive journey. No doubt, such men, if undetected, ripen into forgers on a large scale, tamper with cheques and signatures, and form small garges for mutual assistance in uttering formed paper. But exam then they proceed less forged paper. But even then they proceed less by skilful imitation of handwriting than by altering small cheques to large ones by the aid of a little acid (a process, by the way, very easily detected), or by signing with a well known name where the handwriting of the person is

Of course, we are not arguing that "convictism" has left no traces. We believe, however, that these are visible in forms of vice rather than of crime, and are, moreover, far less marked and less extensive than it suits our colonial self-complacency to assume. And this same self-complacency is a serious hindrance to same self-complacency is a serious hindrance to the reception of truth in regard to our moral condition. The persons best informed as to the state of crime hesitate to speak out, because they shrink from the unpopularity which they will carn by telling the truth. The article in which we opened the present inquiry has already been denounced by one of our legislators for imputing a "natural proclivity to crime" as "general among the population of New South Wales." Whether the gentleman who so denounced us contemplates an essay developing the Palmerstenian doctrine of original sinlessnesss, either generally or with of original sinlessnesss, either generally or with regard to natives of Australia, we cannot say. For ourselves we still believe that

"Falsehood and fraud spring up in every clime," without the need of any other "old leaven," up with more than common luxuriance at particular places and times, we assume that special causes are at work, dependent on race, climate, occupation, social habits, legislation, and so forth. And we do most combatically believe that the transfer do most emphatically believe that the true patrict is not the man who resents and de-nounces the very suggestion of a native growth of crime, but he who looks the truth fearlessly in the face, points out the force and direction of in the face, points out the force and direction of the great currents of crime, and strives to trace them back to their sources. True respect for the people is shown by sincerity, not by compilment: by endeavouring to make them wiser and better, not by assuming that they need no improvement. New South Wales has had enough of the false prophets who cry "Peace, peace," when there is no peace; and if we can read the signs of the times, she is pretty well sick of them. But, however that may be, no false respect for popular prejudices, no fear of giving offence to itching ears that would fain be tickled, shall prevent us from calling attention loudly and earnestly to evils calling attention loudly and earnestly to evils which we deem more impoverishing than than than cial blunders, more desolating than the Many deliberately shut their eyes against the true import of our criminal statistics. Much, however, of the ignorance which prevails on the subject is not wilful, but due to what we may term arithmetical confusion. Few people are quick enough at figures to work out in their heads a sum in proportion on a large scale—for instance, to calculate off Land what would be instance, to calculate on Lanu wars the results of our rate of crime in a population the results of our rate of crime in a population. We were lately conversing with a very worthy colonist on the frequency of murders during the past year. "Oh!" said he, "but look at all the dreadful murders at home!" We asked him how many murders (putting child-murder of the question) he supposed of the question he supposed there had been in New South Wales within twelve months. He replied no matter for our present purpose whether correctly or not, "Perhaps twenty. He was utterly agnast when we took him that at the same rate the British Isles him that at the same rate the British Isles may serve as an illustration of the confusion of mind which arises from ignorance of population returns or inability to apply the "rule of three." No doubt, an apologist for our criminal statistics may here remark, and with some justice that our small and sparse population accounts for a good deal of the crime for which it gives such ample opportunity. But, on the other hand, it ought to be fairly admitted that this colony, from the very fact of its being so thinly peopled, offers high rewards for konest industry, and ought to be little troubled with crimes committed under the dire pressure of Moreover, if we look at the temptation to lawless acts arising from their probable im-punity, this should also remind us that the proportion of crime committed to crime proced will of course be far greater here than in more fully This consideration organised communities. organised communities. This consideration gives a terrible significance to our list of convictions. And, lastly—for this, after all, is the graramen of the case—this apology implies that crime may be expected to diminish rateably as our population increases; whereas to our grief and terror it is increasing far more than in proportion to our numbers. A reference to some recent Victoria. numbers. A reference to some recent Victorias statistics will give force to this branch of our argument. Their returns exhibit for the past year a considerable falling off in the number of convictions; such reduction being greatest with regard to some of the gravest crimes, especially those of violence. This is as it should be; the law is growing stronger, the detection and punishment of crime more detection and punishment of crime more alarmingly certain, and better than all, the antagonism of society to crime is becoming more decided and better organised. Everybody is with the police and against the malefactor. We will not pursue the details of a painful comparison, but will merely refer our readers to the Argus, of July 13th, in which they will find the criminal statistics of the neighbouring colony very clearly set forth and commented on.

dependently at the same conclusion with our selves, may wonder that we should argue at such length in proof of a fact so plain as the alaiming growth of crime in New South Wales. That fact is doubtless plain to some; but we wish it to be so to all. Till the real condition of the patient is known there will be no existencial treatment. And will be no systematic medical treatment. And there are great masses of people in Sydney who know absolutely nothing of what is going on in the provinces, and who require to be familiar-ised with the unpleasant truth that our boasted institutions have not yet borne fruit in the de-velopment of moral excellence. We trust, however, that we have now sufficiently disposed of this part of our subject. We shall next proceed to speak of what we conceive to be the real sources of crime in the colony under several distinct heads; and to suggest, as occasion shall serve, the remedial or palliative measures recommended by our own observa-tion or by the experience of others. We shall treat first of what we regard as general predisposing causes, whether dependent on prevalent personal habits, or on the conditions of our social life. In the second place we shall treat of those defects in our judicial system which increase the temptations to crime by throwing difficulties in the way of its exposure and punishment. And thirdly, we shall point out instances in which crime appears to us to have been encouraged by misgovernment or perverse legislation. In this grave and complicated task we hope to be assisted by the suggestions of more experienced observers, and to be encouraged by the sympathy of all who prefer bitter but wholesome truth to sugared flat-

THE REV. MR. DILLON.

To the Editor of the Herald.

Sir.,—The Honorable the Frenier, if the caport of his aperch is corroct, stated vesterday evening to the Legislative Assembly that "the Vicar-General cailed upon him (Mr. Martin) to sak for the reasons of Mr. Dillon's removal, and he told him.

Now, Sir. I am quite ready to believe that Mr. Martin spake according to the best of his recollection; there was mothing, Jerbaps, in the matter that seemed to him of sufficient importance to impress the circumstances very deeply in his nearcy. With me, however, the matter had a more paintul interest. The unusual harshness of desling with a cryg man in Mr. Dillon's position, and the peremptory circumtesy to my Archbishop, so utterly unknown to all the correspondence with which avery flowerment hitherto for more than thirty years had honoured him, rendered me naturally enough observant of what was said, and I ask your permission to state briefly what took place. You will see that it justifies what has been so often said by myself and other. that Mr. Dillon suffered the penalty of removal from his effice without any information, either to himself or his superiors, of his alleged fault.

I called upon Mr. Martin on the evening of Sa'urday, the 9th February, and, as he states, desired to learn something of the reasons for Mr. Dillon's removal. Mr. Martin have you not seen the papers. He wont on to say that Mr. Hann had written letters, in which certain accusations had been brought against Fether Dillon; that he (Mr. Martin) had lold Mr. Fairkes to Sgrayard them to me. I asserted him that I had received nose, and I was then informed that they should be sent at once; this promotes being accompanied by an observation about Mr. Bushneshen, was abother, was the imaged to proceed the following meriting to Wollongong, I begged that the papers was the creek sent?

In the course of our conversation, which was quite friendly, and which indeed would have been ensidered by me as private had not Mr. Martin himself made is public and sid

Nothing of any note has occurred in the import markets since the publication of our mail summary yesterday. A fai, demand exists for trade lots, but where sales are forced, prices invariably rule much lower than current

The demand for breadstuffs has been rather affected by advices from the Southern colonies, but without altering prices. Candles are rather firmer: De Roubaix have been placed at 11 d... and large sales have been made to arrive on terms withheld. Liquors are quiet: a sale of an outside brand of rum of good quality and 30 o.p. has been made at 3s. 4d. A lot of Martell's and Hennessy's pale brandy, at 6s. 9d.: and a leading brand of Scotch whisky in bulk, at 4s. 10d. Bulk ale continues falling; £8 to £8 10s. is now the ruling rate for best brands. Manila cigars are improving. A parcel of Havannah-shaped was placed to-day, at 60s., and holders now ask 62s. 6d. for a similar holders now ask 62s. 6d. for a similar parcel. Cortados are unaltered.

THE NEW THEORY OF THE METEORS.

THE NEW THEORY OF THE METEORS.

THE NEW THEORY OF THE METEORS.

The the Edwar of the Times.

Sin. As nobody clack has noticed the suggestion of Mr. Bates that the late sudden change from heat to cold is due to the November meteors passing between us and the sun, I think it worth while to inform those who do not see the monthly notices of the Astronomical Society, that Professor Adams has lately propounded a new theory, which is not only inconsistent with Mr. Bates's idea (not otherwise very probable), but with the hitherto received theory of the meteors.

Professor Newton, of America, thought that of several possible periods, including 3#25 years and 3546 days, the latter was the most probable; and that the noteors form a ting rather less than the earth's orbit, revolving round the sun in that time, with a long lump or thicker part in it, which crosses the earth's orbit in November every 33*25 years on the average. The node or place of crossing also happens to advance in longitude Just enough to make our crossing of the lump, or the great neteric shower, a day later every 33 or 34 years.

Hut Mr. Adams has found out that the nodes of such an orbit have no business to move more than the space equal to a day in 84 years, and that the only orbit which does satisfy all the conditionaris one not less than the earth's, but reaching beyond Satura and 64 times more recentric than the earth's orbit, which it crosses near its own perihelon; and that the period of every meteor in this very elliptical ring is that same 33*25 years, which has been the average period of the "great shower" ever since the year 902. In fact, their orbit is very like that of many of the cumus; and some foreign astronomers have come to a similar conclusion about the August meteors.

In ordinary years we only cross the thin part of the meteoric ring, but every 33rd, and sometimes 34th year also, we cross the thick part. Consequently that thick part must be about 800 million miles long. It is interesting to observe that this enormous expansion of the meteoric theory has resulted

The first number will be issued on MONDAY next, 5th August.

15 horses

10 horses 2 seams of bullocks, with drays, &c.
Stores, tools, and implements to be taken by the pur-baser at a valuation.

chaser at a valuation.

The attention of beginners with small capital is invited to the above, as affording favourable opportunity for an investment which could be extended, as the facilities of the district improved, and which would gradually, but certainly, secure a substantial and valuable property.

The fine herbage and admirable adaptability for stock of the surrounding territory having led to the occupation of an incurrence extent of country, a rapid extinction of any present disadvantage of distance will follow, and place the pastoral properties on the Cloncurry in as good a position as those in the neighbourhood of the present large shipping ports on the East Coast.
